INTRODUCTION

This finding aid covers the gubernatorial papers of the third term of Tennessee Governor Frank Goad Clement, from 1963-1967. It consists of 602 boxes of materials that consist of correspondence, speeches, proclamations, extraditions and renditions, financial records, lists, photographs, press releases, scrapbooks, and miscellaneous materials.

In this collection there is also a supplement of 29 boxes of bills and receipts, correspondence, court records, printed materials, invitations, legal documents, photographs, sketches, and campaign materials, that were missed when the third term materials were processed.

There are no restrictions on the use of the materials and researchers may make copies of individual items for individual or scholarly use.

SCOPE AND CONTENT

This finding aid covers the official papers of the third term of Tennessee Governor Frank Goad Clement for 1963-1967. They consist of 631 boxes of materials such as correspondence, speeches, proclamations, extraditions and renditions, financial records, lists, photographs, press releases, scrapbooks, and miscellaneous materials. There is also a supplement of 29 boxes of bills and receipts, correspondence, court records, printed materials, invitations, legal documents, photographs, sketches, and campaign materials, that were missed when the third term materials were originally processed.

The changes which occurred in Tennessee during the 1950s and 1960s were partly the result of political and economic changes affecting the entire nation. The scope of these changes and the speed with which they were accomplished in Tennessee, however, owed much to political philosophy of Frank Clement. He greatly expanded the governor's role, as well as that of the state government in general. During his three administrations, Tennessee accepted new responsibilities to its citizens and created new bureaucracies to administer them.

Much of the correspondence reflects the impact on Tennessee and Tennesseans of intensely emotional national crises of the 1950s and 1960s. Clement's response to the segregation question, for example, set him apart from other Southern governors and produced thousands of letters from all over the country. This correspondence reflected the extremes of emotional response to the issue by Tennesseans and other Americans, as well as Clement's genuine concern for a course of action which would be legal, fair and satisfactory to his own conscience. Almost as emotional in tone is the correspondence concerning labor law, unrest and corruption, as well as that in regard to his stand on the abolishment of capital punishment in 1965, all of which were divisive issues during Clement's tenure.

In addition to the various types of written records, the Clement papers also include numerous photographs taken during his administrations. Unfortunately, many of the events, dates or persons recorded in these photographs were not identified. Persons associated with the Clement administrations were asked for help and were, indeed, able to identify many subjects. However, many photographs remain unidentified.

The papers of the third administration are noticeably less voluminous than those of the first two. It is unclear why this is so. The great volume of fan mail received by Clement during his first six years in office is not there. There is no way of knowing whether it was discarded by the office staff or simply did not come in the same tidal wave proportions. Also, much of the correspondence of the third administration is less substantive than in the first two. It is possible that, in line with a fairly general tendency of late twentieth-century governments and business, decisions and policy were increasingly discussed in person or over the telephone rather than by mail, as long distance telephoning and long distance travel became cheaper and more efficient.

When the papers of the Clement administration were received in the Archives, they were approximately three times the present volume. Significant reduction in volume was achieved through discarding of extraneous materials: envelopes; printed and unmarked duplicates of correspondence, press releases, etc; and many news clippings from Tennessee newspapers. (Clippings from out-of-state newspapers have been retained, however.) Several cubic feet of materials, dating from the period before Clement first assumed the governorship and from the period between 1959 and 1963 were considered private rather than official papers and were transferred to the Manuscript Collection. Other materials actually were produced by the Browning and Ellington administrations and were transferred to those record groups.

The box numbering for Clement's third term picks up where the first two terms leave off, with Box 501 being the first one in this finding aid. The supplement at the end of this finding aid's boxes are numbered 1 through 29.

SUPPLEMENT TO THE GOVERNOR FRANK G. CLEMENT PAPERS
THIRD TERM
1963-1967

August-November 1985

SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

This supplement to the Papers of Frank Goad Clement, consists of material dating from 1946 through 1962. The majority of the material focuses on Clement's three Gubernatorial Campaigns, those of 1952, 1954, and 1962. Campaign speeches, Correspondence, Invitations to speak, and Press Releases, compose the largest part of this collection. Early materials, such as correspondence and printed materials from Clement's membership in the American Legion, are also present.

Although much of the material included in this addition was created when Clement was not actually serving as Governor of Tennessee, the decision was made to include this as an addition to the Gubernatorial Papers since so much of the material concerns the Gubernatorial Campaigns in which Clement was an active participant. The researcher is thus provided with a look at the early days of Frank Clement and thereby have a more complete record of his significant impact on the State of Tennessee.
